KenCrest Direct Support Professionals Receive MAX Service Excellence Award

Blue Bell, PA - March 23, 2017 -KenCrest (www.kencrest.org) announced today the receipt of the MAX Association's MAX Service Excellence Awards by three of its direct support professionals (DSP). On March 29, Jennifer Hirschfield, Ryan Abner, and Shawna Smith, members of the KenCrest Direct Service Professional team, were honored at the 12th Annual MAX Conference for their work. All MAX Service Excellence Award recipients are nominated by either their peers or supervisors.

Direct service professionals work directly with people who have physical and/or intellectual disabilities with the aim of providing supports that contribute to their independence at home and in a variety of community settings.

MAX's mission is to assist the human service provider community to achieve excellence in the provision of supports and services; several KenCrest employees serve in the MAX Association, in varying capacities.

The Holiday Inn in Kulpsville, PA provided the setting for this year's awards.

About KenCrest – Since 1905 KenCrest has supported children, youth, and adults with intellectual disabilities as well as young children and families residing in economically disadvantaged communities, with a variety of services at locations in PA, CT, and DE.
